*At the time of composition, the harpsichordist would be expected to improvise an accompaniment from a basso continuo part, which I have shown as the bass line. However, to aid the modern accompanist, I have also realized the figured bass as chords, and reduced the orchestra into the right hand, as well as maintained the original figured bass notation. As always is the case, an appropriate accompaniment is the goal. For congregational singing, this was lowered from the original key of G to D.
